Street Life
Vintage cars are the norm on the roads of Cuba. Here, Mendoza takes a break in Central Havana, where tourists eschew modern taxis for rides in cars from decades past

High art has come to Miami

A new condo invites passersby to keep looking up

Argentine artist Fabián Burgos is known for his geometrically energetic canvases that you can hang on a wall, but for his latest project, he was the one dangling. Velocidad Brichell takes up the entire side of a glitzy new Brickell Heights condo in Miami, covering a space the size of seven basketball courts, and requiring the artist to get comfy on suspended scaffolding 70 feet above the street. The new size suits him, as he's begun working on another huge mural across the street on the SLS Lux Brickell, set to be complete by the end of the year.
